But we are wandering on, From hill to hill the star-light sleeps, Across the bog to yonder deeps. And now tis autumn time: We hear all night the screeching loon, Timed by the stroke of Ocean s boom. For days, the Wind from out the east, Has blown his fiercest trumpet wild, And high o er all the roaring tide. O lay beneath the pines at night! Long after weary storms have ceased, And hear old Ocean mourn in grief. O hear at night on old Cape Cod, The mystic echoes round the shore! The glory of old Ocean s roar! WE marked the morning s early light, Glance radiant o er the low dark hills, And gild afar the quaint wind-mills. The sandy knolls were touched with gold Where grew the thistle seared and pale, And low brown moss, from dale to dale. Here lays the desolate swamp of reeds, And lowly moors of Cat Nine Tails, That loudly creak when north wind wails; And in the cold morass stands dead, The sword stalks of brown sweet fiags, Where the blue Iris droops and fades. The bushy fences round the fields, And the tall grass clustering brown, Huddles in knots along the ground; And from the stark and outer shores, The wild duck finds his still retreat, Remote from town, or dusty street. There the bittern loudly calls, Where the wild bird builds her nest, And...
